The Unsung Hero

Anna Kujur

I had a keen desire from my childhood to work for the poor, downtrodden people who were denied their rights and justice.

-Anna Kujur

A selfless social activist, an eco-revolutionist who has dedicated her life for the betterment of tribal people. She is a fearless Adivasi leader from the Sundergarh district of Odisha. Sundergarh is a predominantly tribal district in north-west Odisha where over half the population is Adivasis, who depend on forest product and agriculture for their livelihood.

Since 2002, Anna di, as she is popularly known in Odisha, has organized the Adivasis in the district under the Athkosia Adivasi Sangathan. However, later she decided to expand the organization to include non-tribal and renamed it Athakosia Loka Sangathan. She has helped over 30,000 Adivasis realise their claims to land and forest rights under the Forest Rights Act, 2006. She has managed to do all this with very meagre resources, with the power of collective action.

Anna took up social work when her son was merely one month old. Educated only till Class VIII, she did not allow that to deter her. What prompted her to take such pioneering steps is, looking at her landless parents in young age, working day and night to make ends meet and after marriage, meeting people at her in laws' village who were completely unaware of government schemes for them and of their rights.

For her selfless social work, Anna has been awarded by the district collector and felicitated by the state government. She has also been awarded by the Government of India for her selfless service for the needy people. Her sole aim is to help the simple forest dwellers live with dignity and pride and she has struggled a lot to achieve her aims.
